NORWICH TOWN

Conditions in Turkey Described by Mrs. George R. Knapp—Meeting of Willing Hand Club.

The Lethbridge Memorial Foreign Missionary society of the First Congregational church was addressed Wednesday afternoon by Mrs. George R. Knapp of Harport, Turkey. Among the large number present were some from the Yantic church, and there were besides Mrs. Knapp, four others who had been missionaries in Turkey.

The address was a clear showing of the conditions of life in Turkey—so real that after the meeting one said that he thought as though she was back living there again. Roy Knapp, her hearers with her during the last twelve days' trip from the seaport on the Black Sea to Harport, in the far interior. Entering the city they were met by friends and native Christians. There are 400 orphans, youths and children lined up along the streets singing welcome. In this orphanage school their work was to be Peculiar Conditions.

The conditions and modes of life in the interior of Turkey are as plainly the life from the life in Constantinople and places near. Speaking of the constitution one could almost see the members of New London and other pastors and delegates starting out for the meeting at Adams; then the gloom, when word came that all had fallen before reaching there—last but not least a cry of joy that went up when one out of all that company came back unharmed.

Evangelistic Work.

In describing the evangelistic work she made her audience see plainly the hardships and the rich rewards of the ten months' touring of the missionary and his companion. In the villages it is easy to find those who have left the mission school and learned of Christ; the simple faces is a contrast to those about them who know only the treadmill of life. Mrs. Knapp spoke of the work in the orphans' school and its influence in shaping their after lives of the pupils. Only two out of the fourteen hundred have proved unworthy of the help received.

Industrial Work.

Fourteen years ago there was no industrial work, little by little spinning and lace weaving and rug making were introduced. One thousand have gone from the school to the outside world. During the year Mr. Knapp's son, Mr. Alexander, left East Haddam at the age of 17 going to Salem where he took up the trade of cooper. He carried on a cooperative business in East Haddam for a short time finally settling in New Haven where he has taught the younger generation to spin and weave. Johnson Dry works. Later he went to Millstone where he was chief carpenter for several years. Still later he was employed by the Unicross Mfg. Co. as carpenter and his latest regular employment was with the lumber combination of the old dry mill company.

Mr. Alexander married Nancy E. Chapel on January 18, 1888, his wife being a descendant of an old Montville family. She died on Christmas day 1908. Mr. Alexander's son, George E.,

now 20, is a student at the University of Connecticut.
